SAYS	THINKS
• "I have too many applications to review manually every day." • "I need more information before I can trust my decision." • "Some applicants look fine on paper but turn out risky later."	• "There has to be a faster way to do this without missing risky cases." • "I wish I could just enter the details and get a reliable answer instantly." • "I'm worried about approving someone who ends up defaulting."

Bank Credit Analyst (reviews and decides on credit card applications)
DOES		FEELS
• Manually checks each applicant's income, employment, and credit history. • Cross-references payment history records for red flags. • Prioritizes which applications to review first based on gut feeling and available time.		• Overwhelmed by the volume of applications. • Anxious about making a wrong call that costs the bank money. • Frustrated that manual review is slow and inconsistent between analysts.
